Beginning Your Sustainability Journey: Lessons Learned From Sofitel

Hotels can be like small cities with complex infrastructures and intricate moving parts. "Going green" on such a large scale can be daunting, but the benefits are undeniable and the tools for success are out there. For some firsthand guidance on how to start, what to expect, and where to find help, we tapped Rex Umbay, Director of Engineering at the Sofitel Los Angeles, a recently Green Seal-certified gem in the heart of glamorous Beverly Hills.

Cerise Bridges: Thanks so much for taking the time to share your experience and insights with us, Rex. Let's start with the basics. Could you give a quick snapshot of the building - the year it was built, recent renovations, etc?

7 COCKTAIL STAND-OUTS

Frederic Zemmour, Mixologist Master and Director of Operations at Riviera 31, the Sofitel's hotel bar, adorns a cocktail called Fighter Weapon School - AKA Top Gun with—you guessed it—a mini paper plane (photo above). Not only does it add a playful touch, it sets the tone for a signature take on a classic bourbon cocktail, the Paper Plane. The drink, a highlight on Riviera 31's spring and summer menus, features Bulleit bourbon, Aperol, Amaro Nonino, lemon juice and passionfruit juice—plus that snappy little paper airplane to catch the eye.

Kourtney Kardashian channeled her inner Carmen San Diego for Younes Bendjima's birthday—and no, we're not talking about a role-playing fantasy. "For once," she teased on Instagram Stories, "he has no idea where we're going."

THREE MUST-DO OUTDOOR DINING EXPERIENCES IN LA THIS SUMMER

These last couple of weeks has been a flurry of enjoying exceptional food and drinks outdoors. Cattle and Claw, the new pop-up restaurant on the patio of Sofitel LA, featured two of everyone's favorite foods to experience al fresco: burger and lobster. There were lobster rolls, lobster tacos and lobster salad; burgers in three sizes (from sliders to petite to a two-handed ten-ounce patty on a bun); a bloody mary made with lobster-infused vodka, and three of my personal favorite cocktails that begin with the letter "m"—Moscow mules, mojitos and margaritas. With everything served on wooden paddles and one of the prettiest patios in all of LA, the evening was a primer in how to please a crowd with a minimal amount of fuss.

Located at the Sofitel Los Angeles at Beverly Hills, Cattle & Claw serves up incredible bites and a creatively cool garden patio—perfect for summer. According to Yelp, Cattle & Claw offers the best burger and lobster roll in the Beverly Grove area—and our tastebuds agree! The restaurant is now celebrating its one-year anniversary with the launch of an all-new menu, highlighting the best of SoCal food and drinks. In addition to shareable appetizers (try the summer kebab, $12, or the Caprese salad, $15) and family friendly entrées (think lobster paella, $27, and lobster pizza, $23), Cattle & Claw also has introduced a Beyond Burger ($15)—a plant-based burger without GMOS, soy or gluten that's perfect for vegan guests.

Complementing the cuisine is a cocktail menu brimming with a number of wines by the glass, plus a selection of California local craft beers and mason jar cocktails, including a lobster bloody Mary made with lobster-infused vodka. Enjoy it all alfresco while taking in the blooming ambiance of the restaurant's garden patio. Cheers!

Beverly Hills' Most Instagrammable Hotel Is a Queer Hotspot
By Diane Anderson-Minshall

When I was a kid, my friends and I all dreamed of going to Hollywood to hang around movie stars and to Beverly Hills to hobnob with the rich and famous. (They were always the same people in my 11-year-old mind as I had yet to learn the phrase "actor-waiter.")

Turns out those cities are adjacent, and right next to the LGBTQ mecca that is West Hollywood, and when folks in Los Angeles say "Hollywood" it's more of a sentiment than a location. As an entertainment journalist, I've spent plenty of time in the area, and after a while visiting Beverly Hills became less exciting than say a trip to Caracas. Visiting one hotel and seeing it through a plucky foreign couple's eyes, however, changed all that.

Landing at the Sofitel Los Angeles at Beverly Hills—en route to a red carpet event that night that was just feet away—I'm sandwiched in line at reception between a famous basketball player and his lady friend (she's dressed like a Kardashian, because L.A.), a cute lesbian-bi girl couple from China (their English was patently so I never really got their names, but their Gen Z enthusiasm for queer America was infectious).

While you're there, do a few musts at the hotel before you head out on the town. First, a visit to the award-winning L'Art de Vivre Spa where a magical massage got me ready for my red carpet moment. The farm-to-table breakfast was worthy, but it was dinner at Cattle & Claw's outdoor garden that I can't stop raving about. As other in-the-know omnivores have discovered, it offers unusual lobster (and burger) combinations that must be tried. The vegan Beyond Burger and the always popular lobster and beef burger are two wonderful choices. For brunch you can get lobster waffles, lobster benedict, and bottomless lobster bloody mary and mimosas that'll have you feeling like you're one of the ladies on Sex and the City (though I'm assuming many of the Millennials I saw at the hotel won't get that reference). But it was the lobster tacos for lunch and the lobster ravioli for dinner that turned out to be my favorite meals.

The Oscar winner, 51, arrived at the four-star hotel Sofitel Los Angeles at Beverly Hills at midnight and headed straight to the VIP section, where he hugged and high-fived guests. He was joined by two men and a mystery blonde woman.

As employees brought over tequila and Belvedere vodka, "Jamie stood to the side, taking photos with an old-school camera," an eyewitness tells US Weekly exclusively.

Foxx sat down next to Dixon and chatted with her as she sipped a cocktail. Around the same time, Leah Remini's husband, Angelo Pagan, and his salsa band started playing music for the crowd.

"They brought out more bottles and sparklers and everyone crowded around Deidra to take videos and photos," the onlooker says. "Jamie was on the outside of the circle, holding one of the light sparklers in one hand and filming on his camera in the other."

As the band continued to play, Foxx jumped around on stage before returning to his VIP seat near former 106 & Park host Terrence J. He then danced to "Gold Digger," his 2005 single with Kanye West, while taking a selfie video on his camera.

Hollywood Remake: L.A. Hotel Sets the Stage for Glamorous Meetings

The Sofitel Los Angeles unveils a meeting-space redesign with a dedicated kitchen and Hollywood touches.

Hannah Kinnersley | Sep 30, 2019

More than 10,000 square feet of meeting space at the Sofitel Los Angeles at Beverly Hills has been reimagined with a French-inspired modern design. The clean lines incorporate natural light from soundproof floor-to-ceiling windows in all the event rooms, and gilded touches and black-and-white portraits evoke the golden days of Hollywood. The 3,862-foot Beverly Ballroom can accommodate 400 attendees theater-style or 300 for a banquet, with a built-in marble bar and adjacent 1,450-square-foot Beverly Lounge prefunction space. There are six other meeting rooms on the same floor and two outdoor venues, Le Jardin and Avary terraces, and two private dining areas. There are also two 1,400-square-foot pool decks available for receptions.

The hotel's award-winning restaurant, Cattle & Claw, offers classic steak and lobster dishes as well as its own Beyond Burger for vegans. Cocktail bar Riviera 31 offers small plates and live music.

Spread over 10 floors, the 267 guest rooms and 28 suites have views of West Hollywood. Other amenities include a hair studio and the Sofitel brand's SoSPA and SoFIT. The property is 10 miles from Los Angeles International Airport and 13 miles to Bob Hope Airport, in Burbank.

Riviera 31 at Sofitel Los Angeles at Beverly Hills unveils 'indian summer' cocktail collection

Posted on 24th October 2019 in Industry News

Riviera 31 at Sofitel Los Angeles at Beverly Hills has debuted a new cocktail menu inspired by the Angeleno lifestyle surrounding health and wellness.

Director of Nightlife Aidan Demarest, who joined the Sofitel team in August 2019, has curated a limited-edition cocktail collection designed to cure the summer hangovers and embody the health-conscious City of Stars. In a town where there is no shortage of gluten-free, vegan and clean-eating spots, Demarest has introduced his first cocktail menu for the property entitled 'Indian Summer.'

Comprising seven drinks, the menu offers both alcoholic and non-alcoholic sips perfect for a pre-holiday cleanse or Awards Season preparation. Demarest combines unique flavors with holistic ingredients that aim to wot the taste buds while leaving guests feeling refreshed. With innovative names such as "Tulum Bounceback" and "Yoga Deck," visitors can work up a sweat on the dance floor and detox at the bar.

"My intention with this new cocktail collection was to pair our mixology experience with our vibrant eclectic world music program while keeping it clean and sexy. Using fall inspired earthy ingredients in light and fresh recipes, I created these cocktails to end the summer season and embrace fall on a health conscious note," said Demarest.

The cocktail menu is made with fresh juice and his very own simple syrup made in house. 'The Enlightenment' ($20) is light and tangy using vodka, pomegranate juice, lemon and elderflower liquor topped with sparkling wine. For kombucha lovers, the menu's reimagined Paloma ($20) will become their new go-to drink, combining blanco tequila, grapefruit juice, habanero and kombucha. For those looking for an elevated mocktail, the 'Puff Down' ($15) intends to detox with key ingredients like turmeric ginger syrup and lemon juice.

Jeremy Meeks — better known across the internet as “hot felon” — was already notorious as a convict, internet meme and catwalk model. When his blue-eyed, pouting police mugshot — replete with tattooed teardrop, scar and 5 o'clock shadow — went viral and he was signed up by an agent while still in prison, he seemed to epitomise a new level of madness in our celebrity culture: not just famous for doing nothing à la Kardashian, but famous for looking really good while doing something really bad.

How Three Women Channel French Style, No Matter Where They Are

Living in the moment, the French way @anaistori on enjoying a Riviera-inspired getaway in the heart of LA

If you're looking to emulate the glamour of the French Riviera, you can certainly do so in LA, says Anais Tori. Born in the South of France, the content creator now lives in Los Angeles; during a weekend staycation at the Sofitel Los Angeles in Beverly Hills, she was reminded of her French roots.

Anais recommends starting the weekend with sun and solitude: a crepe on the beach with a book in hand is one of her favorite ways to enjoy some me-time. As art de vivre means finding newness in the everyday, head to a farmer's market to try something unexpected from a speciality stall before taking a bike ride along the beach in the sun. Make your way to Venice Beach for a relaxing sunbath worthy of the French Riviera.

On her most recent trip, Anais headed to Diner en Blanc, a Sofitel partnered event across the United States, wearing a simple mini dress with an elegant V-neckline and stacked gold accessories. She ended the day at the hotel's Riviera 31 piano bar. There's nowhere better to enjoy a touch of the Côte d'Azur's luxurious lifestyle.
